The roles and responsibilities or functions of the above consultative arrangements shall include:

HSE Committee or Consultation Group

Where established an HSE Committee consists of a minimum of four employee/subcontractor members and at least one Pindan Contracting management representative. The HSE Committee assists with the development and monitoring of safe work practices and systems, and identifies for discussion those issues that have the potential to affect the health, safety and welfare of personnel or the environment at Pindan Contracting projects or workplaces. Pindan Contracting will respond to requests and recommendations by the HSE Committee in a timely manner. The current minutes of HSE Committee meeting are displayed in a prominent location(s). In the absence of a fully qualified HSE Committee, agreed consultation arrangements may include a HSE Consultation Group, which can function in a similar fashion to a Committee as outlined above.

HSE Representative

Where an HSE representative(s) is elected at the workplace, that person is democratically elected in accordance with West Australian legislation for a maximum period of 2 years. Employees or subcontractors are encouraged to raise specific HSE issues directly with their supervisor or the elected HSE Representative. Where the immediate supervisor or HSE representative cannot resolve an HSE issue it shall be referred to the HSE Committee/Consultation Group.

Workplace Meetings

Some projects and workplaces may consist of a small number of personnel and an HSE Representative or Committee is not requested or not required by legislation. For these projects or workplaces Pindan Contracting will consult with its workforce and agree on a Consultation Group. Pre-Shift Briefings are required to be undertaken on a daily basis with Tool Box Talks undertaken at intervals not exceeding fortnightly intervals. Health Safety Environment issues are a formal agenda item at all such meetings and the minutes/recordings and attendees of the meetings are maintained in the site office.

Review of Consultation Arrangements

Pindan Contracting, in agreement with its workforce, commits to the ongoing review and monitoring of these arrangements with employees to ensure consultation is effective and HSE issues are resolved.
